Flippa

Company Overview

About Flippa
Flippa is the #1 global online platform to buy and sell digital real estate, such as websites, eCommerce stores, apps, social media accounts, newsletters and online businesses. Flippa has more buyers than any other platform, with 600,000 monthly searches from investors seeking to acquire businesses, and connects business owners with a pathway to exit.

Founded
In 2009, Flippa invented the space for buying and selling digital businesses and as a bootstrapped startup has achieved #1 status globally. Flippa was originally founded by Mark Harbottle and Matt Mickiewicz as the SitePoint Marketplace, and was spun off as a separate website in June 2009. By 2015, it had traded more than $140 million in websites, domains, and mobile apps.

What Makes Flippa Unique
Flippa’s proprietary intelligent valuations engine and matching algorithm accurately values businesses and matches them directly with qualified buyers. From business owners to serial entrepreneurs, customers can sell their company directly through the platform or with the assistance of a broker or M&A advisor. The product also offers due-diligence and acquisition finance powered by Yardline Capital (a Thrasio company) and a new service called Flippa Legal which is billed as legal-as-a-service. Flippa’s platform and network is providing for the first time an end-to-end platform for the selling process.
